TRIUMPHANT BRITISH TROOPS NOW PUSH FORWARD TOWARD CAMBRAI, FORMER GERMAN HEADQUARTERS IN WEST

Village of Fontaine Notre Dame, Three Miles South of Cambrai, Now in Hands of General Byng's Forces; Scores of Towns and Villages and 8,000 Prisoners Taken; British Cavalry is Now Taking Part in Drive; Infantry and Tanks Having Torn Big Holes in Teuton Lines.

GERMAN SUPPLY SYSTEM MENACED BY ATTACK

By Associated Press

LONDON Nov 2.—The village of Fontaine Notre Dame has been captured by the British in their new offensive the war office announces.

Fontaine Notre Dame is two and three-fourths miles south of Cambrai on the main road between Bapaume and Cambrai.

Triumphant in their brilliant stroke against the Hindenburg line British troops are pushing on Cambrai, now only three miles away. In two days the British have gained almost as much ground as in the first four months of the Somme battle.

As it was unlike any previous operation on the west front, so was the success of General Byng's smash. Without artillery preparation and with only tanks to cut the wire entanglements, British infantry tore such holes in the German defenses that British cavalry is now taking part in the drive toward Cambrai and the Belgian border beyond.

Surprised by the suddenness of the thrust Tuesday, the Germans fought back Wednesday, but the British pushed steadily toward the immediate goal. Nearly a score of towns and villages have been taken and more than 8,000 prisoners have been captured.

The Germans have been driven from the high ground west and southwest and south of Cambrai, the city formerly the German main headquarters in the west and one of the main links in the German supply system is at the mercy of the British artillery.

BERLIN DENIES THAT FRONT HAS BEEN BROKEN

Today's war office statement from London confines itself to reporting this single operation. What is going on within the remainder of the wide field of the British offensive is described as "spectacular" begun on Tuesday remains veiled by official reticence.

News dispatches from London however indicate that everything has not been said of the extent of the British victory. Emphasis is placed on the fact that the cavalry is posted in action in large numbers while some reports declare that British forces have pushed forward from Grancourt but the beaten wing of the Hindenburg line potentially imperiling the retreat of the Germans who were entrenched between the Bapaume-Cambrai road and the St. Epe river opposite Arras.

Berlin's account of the battle announced continuing fighting coupled with a denial that the front was broken although admitting that the British had gained ground beyond the German front line.

BERLIN CONCLUDES ENEMY GAINED "A LITTLE GROUND"

BERLIN via London Nov 22.—The battle southwest of Cambrai is continuing, army headquarters informed today. The enemy's statement declared that they did not succeed in breaking through though they gained a little ground beyond the front line.

The German statement says that on the west bank of the Schie the Germans drove back the British at Anneux and Fortain and that on the east bank of the river the British were forced back into their former positions south of Rumilly.

BERLIN ANNOUNCES CAPTURE OF TWO ITALIAN HEAVIES

GERMANS ATTACK FRENCH, REPULSE WITH BIG LOSSES

BATTLE OF GIANTS ON PIAVE NEARING ITS CULMINATION

Germans Stubbornly Opposed By Italians and Advance But Slowly.

FIGHT AT MONTE GRATTA

By Associated Press
ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS Wednesday Nov 21.—The battle in the mountainous region in the north between the Piave and Brenta rivers is nearing its culmination. Centers at Monte Gratta and has been a struggle of giants.

It is now clear that notwithstanding the great numbers of troops employed by the enemy and his advantages of terrain he is able to advance only very slowly now that he is not being assisted by the elements of surprise, by treason and other circumstances which favored him at first.

Even if the Italians should have to abandon the Piave river line they may be expected to fall back more slowly and offer still more tenacious opposition.

ITALIAN TROOPS AMONG ITALIANS INVADING ITALY

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS Wednesday Nov 21.—The greatest mass attack which the enemy has made in progress along the upper Piave river at the point where it bends toward the Belluno tip.

As the action proceeds the enemy is bringing forward fresh reserves including picked troops of the Prussian guards besides some of the best German troops drawn from the west and Russian fronts. He also has 8,000 mountainers from lower Hungary whose names are noted for their brutal vandalism.

A large number of the men who have been selected on the various for service at the December and the December adjourned terms of criminal and civil court are now in the service and it is expected that more than one special venue will have to be called during the term of criminal court which begins December 10.

Jury Commissioner Hackney a veteran on the board is preparing to send letters to the central committee in every precinct of the county asking for names of citizens qualified for jury service in each district. It is probable that 1,000 names will be placed in the jury wheel at the beginning of the year.

Mr Hackney said today that he is in touch with the committees to send names of men who are not likely to be called for military service during next year. A great number of the men who have been called for jury service in Fayette county during the last few years have been young business men. Now it seems that it will be necessary to have older men on the jury.

During the war it is probable that more farmers will be called for jury service than ever before and even with the elimination of the young men from jury service it is going to be difficult to secure juries. There are always many farmers summoned for jury service who ask to be excused on account of their crops and stock demanding attention and with all of the country's agricultural interests spending up production it is certain that there will be more than ever who will ask off the jury.

TWO BIG NEWS FEATURES

The Pittsburgh Gazette Times Adds Two Additional War Features to Its Sunday Paper.

Two of the most notable features ever offered newspaper readers—certainly the biggest things printed in any but the very largest of the metropolitan journals—are announced for publication this winter in The Pittsburgh Gazette Times. They are "A Journal From Our Legation in Belgium," by Hugh Gibson, who was Secretary at the Legation in Brussels during the early days of the world war and when the city was occupied by the Germans and a series of 12 entirely new stories by Sergt. Arthur Guy Empey, whose book, "Over the Top," has proved the literary sensation of the year. Both are to start in the issue of Sunday, November 25.

Mr. Gibson's book will be printed as a serial. It is one of the most remarkable things written about the war. Gibson is a real man and his account of the happenings at Brussels during the German invasion of Belgium is a wonderful mingling of the tragic, the pathetic and the humorous. It is a fascinating record of facts made by a diplomat who jotted them down day by day, not off the film of life. Clean cut as a cameo. Mr. Gibson's narrative is conspicuous not so much for its revelations of things not known before, as for its almost startling insight into the workings of the official German mind and its vivid pictures of the little incidental details which made up so much of the life of the time and place.

Sgt. Empey's articles will appear on consecutive Sundays until the series has been completed. He is the American who, at the sinking of the Lusitania, went abroad and enlisted and who, after months in the thick of things, "Over There" wrote "Over the Top," a book which has sold faster than it could be printed. For stalwart, red-blooded Americanism there are few productions that can vie with his writings. The coming stories are new, not excerpts or rearrangements of matter previously printed, and they are sure to be among the most thrilling tales of the war as seen by the man in the trenches.

Russia has made such a pitiful mess of everything in the last few months, despite all the efforts of her allies to assist her in the newly-acquired freedom, that reproaches from that unfortunate land, implying that the United States, Great Britain and France are largely to blame for the present collapse, must seem singularly tactless to Americans. But they are uttered none the less by a gentleman now in Washington, said to be a representative of the Council of Soldiers' Delegates, who complains that the allies will not understand the situation in Russia. It is taken as a grievance that they do not take the point of view of the peasants and that they will not state their aims in such a way as to win the enthusiastic support of these simple-minded persons.

Probably there is some truth in this, but it is difficult to understand why the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Serbia, all of which countries understand perfectly why they are at war, should consider it necessary to state their purposes in such a way as to command them to a people so lacking in patriotism that the possession of a large part of their territory by an invader arouses in them no resentment. Indeed, without any pressure from the Germans, the Russians have voluntarily relinquished ground which they could easily have held, and their betrayal of Rumania has been one of the tragedies of the war. It is astonishing that such a country, so incompetent in war and so torn by internal dissensions that it is creased to have no military value, should presume, in the person of a representative, to chide nations of more heroic mold, which bear their great losses and sacrifices bravely and return blow for blow. Ingratitude goes so far that it is said of the United States, which has neglected no opportunity to assist the tottering new republic, that "Agerica might have saved the situation, but she did not act. Her words were fair, but her actions denied her words."

If Russia is to be saved from the anarchy into which she is drifting, she must save herself. It is absurd to think that more civilized nations will change their courses simply to win the approbation of a vast mass of illiterate and ignorant peasants. The United States certainly has no reason to reprobate itself for having failed in any respect to play the role of the good Samaritan.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM

Johnstown Democrat.

The constant loss to large manufacturers through their inability to retain employees by reason of poor housing conditions brings sharply into consideration the effect of land speculation on the industrial world. Industrial wages no longer figure as the vital factor in maintaining manufacturing plants at their highest productive capacity. The new disturbing element is the constant shifting of workers, necessitating readjustment in hiring and training of interest arrivals. Heavy as has been the drain upon the labor market since the beginning of the war, the embarrassment and losses of large employers long antedates the beginning of hostilities. In 1913 Henry Ford lost $2,500,000 in hiring, training and dispensing $2,445 men in order to keep 15,000 men at work; and the loss to the wage-workers amounted to $15,000. Thus in one year there was a total loss of nearly $3,000,000. Another automobile concern computed its loss, in 1916, due to the same cause, at $108,000.

Throughout the United States the same conditions exist, causing in the aggregate an enormous financial loss. In the ship yard districts of the country and in those centers where there are munition manufacturers, the lack of proper homes for workingmen has become so acute as to call forth an inquiry into the subject in the October number of the Nation's Business. According to an article in this periodical by an expert for the United States shipping board, the labor turnover in this one industry alone has within a short time reached 70 per cent. Influence is drawn from this abnormal condition that the government will be forced to follow the course of Great Britain in providing permanent as well as portable houses for workers, at least in the shipyard and munition manufacturing districts.

The state of Massachusetts is perhaps the first commonwealth to take the initiative in the home building business. In the city of Lowell, one of the largest manufacturing centers in New England, nearly a score of homes are in course of construction under state supervision, $50,000 having been appropriated for the purpose.

THE SCHOOLS AND THE FUTURE

Public Ledger.
The colleges, and the preparatory schools have by this time had time to take account of stock, as it were, and they know the worst as to attendance and its character that the war can bring them this year. At the same time, what they and the high schools have learned is of such a nature that it is already clear that, unless immediate steps are taken to conserve those who will in the future be sorely needed by the country, to take the leadership in its trained professions and in its specialized vocations which call for experts in the engineering lines, their promises to a great extent not only of available material for the next collegiate year, but a still greater falling off in the graduates within the next four years.

That this is a matter that concerns the high schools and preparatory schools in a peculiar manner, as well as the colleges, is also patent to all who are wrestling with the problem which, in a way, has got beyond the control of teachers and administrators of schools and colleges. Therefore it would seem that now is the time for a little mutual co-operation of all the various factors concerned. Educators and industrialists and Government officials should come to some definite plan in the near future that will give the country the unity of plan that it needs for the school year of 1917-1918 in order to prevent drastic shutting down of the future supply of officers. For instance, whether the suggestion of part-time employment in industries in addition to school work can be put on a practical basis generally calls for the fullest and freest discussion. Just how the colleges can adjust themselves to the demands of the hour is also a problem. But the facts must be faced and now is the time to get at it. To wait until next spring is folly.

Rippling Rhymes

WHAT'S THE TRUTH?

War stories, always on the wing, fair me, oft are fabricant and traveling come up and spirit their endless contradictions. I can't imagine where we're at, as I compose this sonnet; one man is talking through his hat, another through his coat. One man who's returned from France relates the stories fighting says: "Kaiser Wilhelm's name is Pance—he's beaten at this writing." I go outdoors to celebrate, my soul is glad and sunny; then comes along another mate who says, "I'm told he's been beaten at this writing." In fact, he's growing stronger; don't foul yourself and think he's scared—he'll fight for nine years longer." One day I read the submarine are knocked out by the Couriers. I feed to eat and skinned, and then I read another tale, which starts the teardrops flowing: the efforts of the British fall—the U-boat graft is growing. What is the truth? Where are we at? Produce the facts, doggone it! One man is talking through his hat, another through his bonnet.

Any howdy it's almost June And school days will be over soon."

One time we played a baseball game, And when a chance for stealing came On second base he stood, And when we asked him why, he said: "What was the use, they're far ahead."

He's not a good boy, but she did get act. Her words were fair, but her actions denied her words."

ENGLISHMEN AT FRONT GET POUND OF MEAT DAILY

allowance a Quarter Greater
For Soldiers in the Trenches.

QUANTITIES ARE NEEDED

Australia and New Zealand Have Already Furnished Lamb, Mutton and Beef Worth 200 Million Dollars. Argentine a Big Supply Source.

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Nov. 12.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The British army ration scale allows one pound of meat to each man daily to the troops in the trenches, and three-quarters of a pound to those at home. It further requires each soldier at the front to carry a pound of meat in his kit.

The measures by which an army equal to one-fifth of the male population of Great Britain before the war has been supplied with meat on this scale amount to something like a revolution in the technique of army supply.

At the very beginning of the present war it was decided to provide frozen meat for the army and the boards of trade at once entered into negotiations with firms importing meat from the Argentine for a monthly supply of 15,000 tons. Later a "meat committee" was set up, and concerned with the work of importing meat not only for the British army, but also for the French and Italian governments and for the British civil population.

The principal source of supply at present is the Argentine, with assistance from Australia and New Zealand. Both Australia and New Zealand have received their entire surplus supply of meat for the use of the imperial government, and over $200,000,000 worth of beef, mutton and lamb has been brought from those countries.

To carry these enormous quantities of meat to the troops the board of trade requisitioned all the shipping engaged in the frozen meat traffic. Some of the meat is taken to England, but the greater part of that required for the armies is landed directly at the baseports, where it is discharged into cold storage warehouses specially erected for the purpose. In this manner there is delivered monthly 20,000 tons of meat for the British armies and 25,000 tons to the armies of Greece, Britain's allies.

The cost of this meat up to the beginning of 1918 figured out at an average of about 12½ cents a pound, but it has since risen to about 16½ cents.

Requisitioning of fresh meat in France for army purposes is almost negligible, and the herds of cattle which followed armies in old-time wars and were slaughtered as required, have disappeared from the field of war.

Frozen meat at present constitutes 80 per cent of the total meat issued to the British army. The remainder is made up of preserved meat of several varieties. The most familiar form is the well-known "bully beef," which is corned beef packed in small strong tins, each containing 12 ounces. Some units cook this bully beef, others prefer it just as it comes from the tin. It comprised the principal article of diet for the army at Gallipoli.

PREPARING FOR GAME

Latriobe Working Hard to Take Fall Out of Connellsburg Saturday.

Latriobe high is practicing hard for the game with Connellsburg high, to be played at Latriobe Saturday. The Westmoreland county boys are out to win. Tuesday night the students turned out to cheer the team at practice, and it is likely that the entire student body will be on the field Saturday.

Last night Coach Puderbaugh sent his men through a hard scrimmage, and after that there was about an hour of signal practice. Among the former Latriobe football men now out coaching the team for Saturday's game is Buzz Herrington, quarterback for Lehigh.

Latriobe is expecting a large crowd of rooters to accompany the Connellsburg team. All accommodations are being prepared for them, according to Manager Lawrence W. Hines of the Latriobe team, who says that they will be treated with the same kind courtesy that was extended to the Latriobe supporters who went to Connellsburg last year.

Railroads' War Board Recommends Elimination of More than 500 Commodities From Transportation.

Denial of rail transportation to more than 500 commodities classed as non-essential has been recommended to the Government by the Railroads' War Board. At the same time the board put out a statement declaring the country's railroads at the present rate of increase in traffic will be unable to meet demands that will be made on them this winter. The commodities included in the recommendations were not made public.

"Both the public and the management of the railroads must courageously face the fact," said the statement, written by Fairfax Harrison, chairman of the board, "that under the trying conditions which will develop this winter it probably will become impossible for the carriers to handle all the traffic which the public can offer."

The course of developments is forcing those responsible for the railroads' operation to anticipate that probably they will become unable to provide transportation for all the classes of commodities which they have been moving. The time may almost be here when it will be necessary to distinguish in railway transportation between things that are essential and those that are not."

The list of commodities classed as non-essential was made up by a committee of railroad traffic officers at the request of Robert S. Lovett, the Government director of priority of transportation. A copy was turned over to the Fuel Administrator, Gen. E. L. Fairchild.

He is contemplating the curtailing of those which will result in loss of the death of coal supplies to industries, not A. C. Holbert, who passed away at necessary to the public welfare. The list home in Somerset Thursday evening contains 450 commodities whose transportation, it is declared, could be dispensed with without any great inconvenience to the public, and 75

THE CONNELLSVILLE BIG VEIN COAL CO. OPENS NEW FIELD

Kendall Interests Developing Rich Deposits on the Cheat River.

TWO MINES IN OPERATION

In a Seven-Foot Seam; Drift Operations With Natural Ventilation; An Output of Ten Cars Per Day; Owners Control Railroad Outlet to B. & O.

Among the numerous newly developed coal properties which go to swell the tonnage from the Fairmont branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, few will presently contribute more generously than the two mines owned and operated by the Connellsville Big Vein Coal company, says the mining and industrial editor of the Meyersdale Republican. The company owns two separate properties with a few miles of Cheat Haven with tipple located on the Cheat Haven & Buckton railroad, in a coal field which has never before been developed.

Horton No. 1 mine was opened last fall and the first car of coal was shipped a trifle over a year ago, although the property was a producer as a country bank a quarter of a century ago but had been closed for 20 years until the advent of the present coal boom and its acquisition by the present management. The Big Vein averaging 7 feet in thickness underlies the property at a depth of about 30 feet below the surface. The main heading at a distance of 300 feet went directly through the hill and thus with one or two other openings furnished the mines with natural ventilation without the necessity of installing fans.

Approximately 40 men are employed owing to the thickness of the seam and the prevailing high wages the company has experienced no difficulties in obtaining labor. Work is prosecuted under the direction of General Superintendent J. B. Coburn and day and night shifts are worked with the result that the average daily shipments run up to 100 steel hoppers.

The pit is located but 100 feet from a receiving bin having a capacity of 15 to 20 tons and thus connected directly with the loading tipple on the railroad by a 250 foot chute.

The second of the company's properties known as the Porter mine is situated half mile distant from the Horton No. 1 mine and like the first is operating in the Big Vein 7 feet in thickness. The property had been developed prior to its being acquired by the Connellsville Big Vein Coal company. The topography of the country makes it most advantageous for low cost mining operations the drift having passed through a hill with a distance of 600 feet solving the problem of ventilation inexpensively.

The pit is covered with the drift on top by a 150-foot incline operated by cable and a 20-ton truck operated by horse power. The drift was designated to hold a car load of coal so that in the absence of car operation could be conducted as usual. A 70 foot trestle, adjacent to the leading tipple, is all that is possible for the company to accept steel hoppers loaded with slag and debris dumped them from the trestle on the hill and haul the empty cars to the coal load in chutes with its own engines.

These mines are near Mount Pleasant above Fairmont on Cheat river in Monongalia county W. Va. on what was formerly known as the Cheat Tract purchased some years ago by the Kendall Lumber company. The Cheat Haven & Buckton Railroad company was organized by the Kendall interests to build a railroad up Cheat river from junction with the Fairmont division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Cheat Haven to provide an outlet for the lumber on the tract. Later the Connellsville Big Vein Coal company was organized to develop the coal deposits. The officers are H. H. Houston, of Connellsville president J. L. Kendall of Pittsburgh vice-president and S. V. Kendall of Meyersdale treasurer and secretary. The company was recently incorporated.

Special to The Courier
SCOTTDALE, Nov. 22.—Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Gilbert figured in a peculiar accident near Turtle Creek while motorizing back from Pittsburgh Tuesday evening. Dr. Gilbert was confronted with the alternative of running into a load of telephone poles used by linemen in erecting poles and possibly injuring the driver or crashing into the posts. He took a chance on the latter but two of the posts crushed through the windshield and extended into the rear of the Gilbert machine where Mrs. Gilbert was riding. She was pinned to the side of the machine so tightly that he was almost unable to get her breath. It took eight men to loose the posts. Mrs. Gilbert was taken to the Columbia hospital at Wilkinsburg where it was found she had suffered several broken ribs. Dr. Gilbert was uninjured and returned to Scottdale.
